If you're interested in earning passive income by promoting reputable affiliate networks and programs, you've come to the right place. Or, if you're new to all of this, let's get started with the basics... An affiliate network acts as a channel between publishers (affiliate marketers) who sell products and services and the merchants who create those products and services offered through their affiliate management, and most importantly - access to a large base of publishers (affiliate marketers). For affiliate management, and most importantly - access to a large base of publishers (affiliate marketers, an affiliate marketers, an affiliate metwork provides a choice of affiliate marketing programs organized by category and popularity, a simple way to join those programs, reporting tools, analytics and payment processing. While affiliate marketers are generally able to join affiliate networks for free, merchants usually have to pay a fee to participate in the network. Affiliate networks usually charge an initial setup fee for each merchant and often a recurring membership fee. There are several payout methods used by affiliate networks including the two most popular models: CPS and CPA. (CPS)Cost-Per-Sale CPS, also referred to as PPS (Pay Per Sale), pays a set commission to the affiliate marketer who refers a lead that results in a purchase. Affiliate marketing companies love the CPS model since they only pay a commission after they get paid first by the purchasing customer. It's basically free marketing and advertising since the affiliate is the one who produces the lead without any up-front cost to them. This is also why CPS payout commission percentages are so high. Incidentally, the CPS model is primarily what we focus on here on this website. (CPA)Cost-Per-Action CPA affiliate marketing programs pay affiliates when a specific action is taken by the referral or lead. Common actions include clicks, impressions, form submits, sign-ups, registrations, or opt-ins. Since Cost-Per-Action models don't necessarily involve a direct sale (and involve more risk taking) the payout percentages are far smaller than they are in the Cost-Per-Sale model. They have strong affiliate networks has a unique set of products, services, and payouts. Each also has its own set of strengths and weaknesses. The choices I've listed above are the affiliate networks that I'm most familiar with. Most I use today or have used in the past and still like. Several focus on high ticket affiliate marketing programs, which is the focus of this website. Below I'll share with you can use, plus any of your own, to choose the best affiliate network or networks for you. How To Choose Which Affiliate Network To Work With Aff team to help you when you have questions or problems? What is their refund rate? Will you have an individual affiliate manager dedicated to your success? Do they demonstrate the leadership qualities that you expect from a business partner? Compare Commission Rates. Making a sale online big or small requires the same amount of work. Why settle for 30% commissions when another network will pay you 70% for a similar product? This is going to require you to do some leg work by visiting each network site and digging around their offers. This is time well spent since it will have a direct impact on your income. Are The Affiliate Network Offers A Good Fit For Your Audience? You need products and services that solve the problems your audience came to you for. You need to determine exactly what it is they're looking for and provide the solution. As marketing legend Dan Kennedy once said, and I am paraphrasing here, 'pair your bait to your critter'. Pick the right network that fills these needs. Are The Products, Services And Offers High Quality? Your reputation is at stake so choose your offers carefully. Your customers are counting on you to refer products that will pay them more dividends than the money off the table and loses the trust of both vendors and your customers. Does The Network Offer Any Add-ons are usually presented at the time of the initial sale. These up-sells add more bells and whistles to enhance the core product. Your customers are under no obligation to buy any of these add-on items, but when they do, you get paid more. Does It Cost Money To Join The Affiliate Network? It shouldn't cost you anything to join an affiliate network. If it does, it better offer something other than just access to their affiliate marketing programs. If it doesn't, you should look elsewhere. What Payment Options Do They Offer? Find out what the payment schedules are. How often do they pay out? Is there a minimum balance needed to trigger payment? One final tip is to agree to receive email updates from your affiliate network of choice Terms and payouts frequently change so you'll want to be in the loop when these changes occur. The product launches I'm referring to are targeted toward other internet marketers and they attract the very best online entrepreneurs in the world. It's extremely competitive and requires a lot of work. It helps a lot to have a sizeable list of followers that are also interested in affiliate marketing. The New Way To Build A Profitable Business Online Even If You Have No Products, Zero Technical Experience, And Hate Selling We hate SPAM too. We will never sell, share or rent your email address to anyone If you've learned enough to know that you're ready to join a few good networks, I have included a quick checklist below on what to do next. It's super easy. Research which affiliate offers programs that best fit your chosen market or niche Visit the affiliate offers programs that best fit your chosen market or niche Visit the affiliate offers you would like to promote and apply to promote them Once you're approved by the merchant you'll have access to your promotional tools such as links, banners and articles Using these tools, promote the offers to your addience You can track your clicks, sales and income in your affiliate network dashboard Rinse and repeat with other affiliate networks What does an affiliate network do? An affiliate network acts as a channel between affiliate marketers who sell products and the merchants who create them and make them available through their affiliate network. Which affiliate network is best? The top ten ranked here are: 1. ShareASale 2. United Affiliates Network 3. Flexoffers 4. Madrivo 5. ArabClicks 6. Moonrover 7. CannAffiliate agency? An affiliate agenc what market niche you would like to promote. 2. Choose an affiliate networks. What does it mean to be an affiliate? In affiliate marketing, the role of the affiliate is to promote the products and services offered by a third party company through an affiliate program. Affiliate programs to join and good affiliate networks to promote Select an affiliate program that appeals to your audience Create a lead magnet (such as an ebook using a tool like Sgribble) and start building a list of fans and potential customers using an autoresponder Give away as much value up from the right products to as many people as you can Use several traffic sources to send people to your affiliate offers Test and track everything you do to determine your best online marketing strategy Once you know how to consistently profit as an affiliate, scale your business Partner With Me And I'll Show You How To Earn $1000+ Per Sale
